

International Conference on Transformations in Engineering Education

Appeal for Corporate Sponsorship

The world needs outstanding engineering talent to address the challenges facing humanity. In particular, employers of today and tomorrow need engineers who have critical thinking and problem solving skills, curiosity and imagination, amongst other traits required for practicing the profession. It is the responsibility of the stakeholders to work towards building ecosystems that attract and nurture talent focusing on these objectives. Therefore, an international conference is being organized to provide a platform lead by the leaders of the Engineering academic community for all the stakeholders to evolve a strategy and implementation road map and adopt the best practices towards achieving the objectives referred above to create an abundance of engineering talent. The vision of this "International Conference on Transformations in Engineering Education" (ICTIEE - Hubli 2014) is to bring together leaders of engineering education and employers from across the world for "Sharing Best Practices of Transformations in Learning Outcomes at Engineering Institutions".

The Conference will be held at BVB College of Engineering and Technology (BVCET), Hubli, Karnataka, India from January 16 to 18, 2014. This college is one of the few colleges which have been able to transform themselves, very significantly, in recent years. The leaders at BVCET believe that IUCEE (Indo US Collaboration for Engineering Education) has helped facilitate this process.

IUCEE along with IFEES (International Federation of Engineering Education Societies), GEDC (Global Engineering Deans Council) and ASEE (American Society for Engineering Education) are co-hosts of this Conference. An IUCEE Summit and a IUCEE-GEDC Chapter meeting will be convened in parallel with this Conference. We expect about 300 leaders of engineering education from across the world to share best practices at this conference.
